

Tisdell, John

University of Tasmania

Institutional and legal arrangements for the protection and provision of ecosystem services in Tasmania

Key words: Institutions, legislation

Abstract:

Tasmania has a unique temperate environment and associated ecosystem services. Protection of its ecosystem services lies in Federal and State legislation and associated environmental policies and regulations. This paper outlines the institutional and legal structures surrounding the protection of ecosystems and the services they provide. We examine their history, effectiveness and how they may evolve in changing climatic conditions.